IMPORTANT FROM WESTERN VIRGINIA.

CINCINNATI, Saturday, Nov. 16, 1861.

Advices from Gen. Rosecrans's headquarters state that on the 10th Gen. Cox's brigade crossed the Ka nawks and New Rivers, and drove the rebels back three miles from all their positions. Gen. Schenck's column intended attacking them in the rear, but was prevented crossing the river by high water.

Gen. Benham's Brigade moved up and began to feel their front, when a sharp skirmish took place, lesting from 4 p. m. till dark, when Gen. Benbam's force lay on their arms, waiting for morn. Troops at Annapolis for Gen. Sherman ing. The rebols began their retreat and were well on their way to Raleigh before the movement was discovered.

Gen. Berham persued them 25 miles amid a drenching cain, but eseing little chance of overtaking them turned back.

In the skirmish with the rear guard, Col. Crogan of the rebel cavalry and a few others were killed.

The loss on our side was two.

Point Perssant, Va., Saturday, Nov. 16, 1861. A sad accident occurred at Camp Piett, 12 miles above Charlesten, this morning. Capt. Bell of Company K, 44th Ohio Regiment, and 11 of his men, while crossing the Kanawha in a skiff, ran under the steamer Commodore Perry. The Captain and 7 of in arms. his men were drowned, and the remainder saved. HORRIBLE ATROCITIES OF THE REBELS-THE Alford, candidate for the Legislature; Mathew Thompson and all his goods; old Mr. Kyle and Morey. These prisoners were lashed together and compelled to walk. Among their other cruelties I will mention one incident; James E. Wood, a citizen of the place for many years, but now in the army, had his hind shot off. He was then run over by the Cavalry and his hins put out of place, but he managed to get to the middle of suspension bridge, jumped off and swam to the opposite shore of the Guyandotte, where he was taken and his hands tied behind him and refused anything to eat until a Secession woman almost compelled them to allow her to administer to his wants, and when they managed to get to the middle of suspensions, your usages, will be scrapplously respected. those only made their escape who were satisfied at the start that the number of the enemy wastoo great to contend against, and fied immediately, except in a few instances where they hid under houses and logpiles until the enemy retired. Some fifty or sixty are known to have got away, and perhaps others will turn up.

The Rebels held the place until about 3 o'clock the next morning, when the steambout Boston came up with about 200 of the 5th Virginia Regiment, under Col. Zeigler. They were joined by a number of the Home Gunrds of Lawrence County, Ohio, who had assembled at Proctorsville, opposite, to prevait the Rebels from landing in Ohio, which they had threatened to do.

On the arrival of the Roston some shots were fired at her from Guyandotte, which were answered by a shot from a small 2-pounder, sending a bull through a Rebel's brick house. The Rebels immediately left on double-quick time, and the hypocritical secession citizens, who had been instrumental in getting up the attack, came on the bank of the Ohio with a great number of white flags, which they waved quite enthusiastically, supposing they could still decive our brave Union men who had pleaded for them and saved their property from destruction, but it was all in vain. Their destruction was decreed by an indignant people, and three regiments would not have prevented them from burning the town. Our troops vain. Their destruction was decreed by an indigmant people, and three regiments would not have prevented them from burning the town. Our troops passed over; a few shots were fired at the rear guard of the retreating Rebels, and a few arrests of leading secessionists, among them H. H. Miller, who had been for some time with the Rebel army, and came in with Jenkins and got trapped at home; E. A. Smith, who was seen firing with a revolver on our soldiers in the street; John S. Everett, who shot at one of our soldiers swimming the Guyandotte, and several others. And then the town was soon in flames. No Union man's house was set on fire, but several caught from the others. ## LOCAL MILITARY MATTERS.

Local Military Matters.

Let is supposed that Jenkins went with his force to his own plantation, as the next night his warehouse was thrown open, a large fire burning in front of it, and a man with a lantern under the benk hailed the steambout Moderator, but our captain was not quite green enough to be caught in that Secesh trap. He, however, rang the bell twice, as though he was going to land. But 10 or 12 men showed themselves, and there is very little doubt that the warehouse was full of his ragamulfia crew.

When I lett, there was a report that 3,000 infantry of the rebel a kruy were at Barbouraville, marching on Guyondotte, but I supposed it to be a false runner.

Mr. Wheeler say, in addition to what he has written, that the first intunation he or any one else had of the attack upon the town, all was confusion, and indiscriminate fighting was going on in the streets. The attack was made about 7 o'clock in the evening, and in a short time the Rebels had formed their lines around the town. Mr. Wheeler made his seeans, in company with his little boy, by running into a correfield with a heavy fire in his rear. He walked all might before he met a man whom he deared to approach upon the subject of crossing the river. When he did finally encounter a Union (!) man, he had to employ the persuacive chink of the almighty dollar before he could be accommodated. Congressman Whaley acted gallantly, appearing in the streets and urging his men to resistance. Total....283,939 180,146....102,152 172,665 187,323 and for President in 1860: Majority for Ballard, 163,793; Wright over Bruce, 15,218. The counties yet to come in gave 2,684 majority for Lincoln over the Fusion ticket last year, and will no doubt increase the Union majority to 105,000 at least-thus THE TRIB-UNE's estimate, on the morning after the election, of 100,000 Union majority, stands justified, with a few thousands to spare. It will be seen that the aggregate vote for Bruce and Tallmadge is 9,182 less than that cast for Ballard for Secretary of State; and that Wright, the Democratic candidate for Canal Commissioner for the short term, runs 7,677 ahead of Jones, the Democratic candidate for Secretary of State. The aggregate vote for Secretary of State is 464,085, being 185,791 less than that cast in the same counties for President a year ago. The returns from the five missing counties will probably increase the aggregate vote of the State about 20,000.

The improvement in some cases has been 4 or day with Mr. Chase promise large profits to the banks, should the war be conducted successfully. Peace would immediately carry the price of Government Sixes above par, giving the banks a profit of over $5,000,000, equal to 8 P cent upon their aggregate capital. Meantime, they are earning 7.30 $ cent interest on some $40,000,000 of Government securities, and 6 & cent on $50,000,000, without reducing in any material degree their mercantile loans. With the last negotiation, the aggregate loans earning income are, in round numbers, $180,000,000; say $12,000,000 annual income, out of which to pay expenses and dividends. banks and their specie reserve remain undisturbed. We consider this arrangement one of the most successful of Mr. Chase's negotiations, and while affording the banks a fair chance of profit for their services in distributing the loan, was made upon terms which, under the circumstances, are as favorable to the country as could have been expected. Its success must have a very favorable influence upon the credit which the action of the operators for the rise has of the United States abroad, as indicating not only been based, and the vague fears of difficulty with the wealth of the North, but the confidence of capitalists in our ability to suppress this rebellion. The stock will be in charge of the Executive Committee of the banks, as are the Treasury Notes, for the joint account of the Associated Banks of New-York, Boston and Philadelphia. After the payment of the call to be made on Monday, the next call will be upon the stock just negotiated. The following call will be upon the second lifty millions of Treasury
